Representative Catchings of Mississippi has returned to Washington from Atlantic City. He expressed the opinion to a STAR reporter to day that the democrats would not lose an electoral vote in the south, and said that he did not think the people's party would have as many members in the next House as they have in this. He is counting on a democratic majority of forty or fifty in the next House. He said was in New York, but that success in that state would depend upon how much in sympathy all branches of the party in the state were. whose very soul craves excitement. The weather reporter suggested that a good way to satisfy his soul's cravings would be to prophesy some warm weather about this time. Possibly that might ruffle the calm.

The weather bureau man replied that he reckoned that would be a good idea. Thereupon he straightway issued a forecast for tomorrow night, promising warmer weather. To accentuate the situation, to kind of rub it in on the people, he said it would continue cool up to tomorrow evening and then turn warm. He didn't say how warm it would be, but just threw out the intimation in the way of a feeler. He says he is in dead earnest about this thing and that it surely will be warmer.

II. Comrades of the several posts of this department will assemble at these headquarters on Tuesday, September 20, at 8 a.m. sharp, for the purpose of taking part in the Grand Army parade. Where it is possible comrades must appear in uniform and wear white gloves. The Grand Army badge on the left breast will be indispensable. It is hoped that no comrade will absent himself from this parade unless on account of sickness or other unavoidable cause. It will be one of the great events of our Grand Army experience and will probably be the last opportunity whereby we can, as a department and in any considerable number, participate in a parade of like dimensions. The location assigned to this department for rendezvous will be announced through the local papers. Comrades will take notice.
